Who should I include in "Number of People Living in Home"? To determine the number of people living in your home, count yourself and all the people who live with you and share expenses, whether they are related to you or not. Include children and adults. Do not include people who live with you but are financially independent, such as a boarder who pays rent.

What is included in "Total Monthly Income"? Total Monthly Income includes the following:

- Gross earnings from work: Use the gross income, not the take-home pay, for everyone living in your home. Gross income is the amount of money each person earns BEFORE taxes and any other deductions. This amount may be found on the paystub or requested from the employer. Net income should only be reported for self-owned business, farm, or rental income.
- Welfare, Child Support, Alimony: Include the amount each person living in your home receives from these sources.
- Pensions, Retirement, Social Security, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Veteran's benefits (VA benefits), and disability benefits: Include the amount each person living in your home receives from these sources.
- All Other Income: Include worker's compensation, unemployment or strike benefits, regular contributions from people who do not live in your home and any other income received. Do not include income from CalFresh, WIC, federal education benefits and foster payments received by people living in your home.
